Additional information

Your learning

- Ability to handle business correspondence and conduct business talks in English
- Acquaintance with the diversity of negotiating styles across cultures
- Performing economic analyses for companies operating in an international environment
- Understanding a variety of issues inherent in the management of international business operations and foreign trade transactions
- Management of currency risk
- Planning and implementing marketing strategies in an international context

Studying this specialisation is a combination of business and language study. Particular emphasis is placed on understanding English financial and accounting terms, and applying this knowledge to the financial services of global companies. You will be prepared to take on professional challenges on your own through exercises and conservatoires, which make up more than 50% of the course of study.
