Additional information

Degree Overview

The aim of the course is to provide students with an international outlook on business and an understanding of the particular demands and restrictions of conducting and managing business globally. During this course, students will develop advanced, specialised knowledge and skills across a broad range of business and management subjects, developing knowledge and understanding of international organisations, their management and the changing global external environment in which they operate; thus developing a strategic overview of business and organisational issues. Students will also develop advanced theoretical knowledge of international business and management subjects including finance, marketing and entrepreneurship and how these are affected by culture.

Study Reasons

- Bangor University offers a wide range of innovative master's degrees (MBA, MSc and MA) which provides students with an understanding of contemporary business themes including sustainability, entrepreneurship, management, leadership, digital marketing, data analytics, organisational behaviour, strategy, brand management and business planning.
