Why Entrepreneurship

Entrepreneurs rarely succeed from their first idea. It's more common to have multiple failures with different ideas, teams, collaborators, and target markets before you succeed. The only way to learn is by trying, failing, and trying again.

From startups to unicorns to multinationals, successful businesses never start with a good idea on its own. You'll need a solid business plan, a collaborative team, and funding. Complete two entrepreneurship modules to qualify for a minor in entrepreneurship, or four for an entrepreneurship major.
