Career opportunities

Employment perspectives

As a graduate of Management studies, you can find work in each enterprise and organisation. You'll be most sought after by companies that operate in line with the specialty you've completed, but a solid foundation of basic and major subjects should make you eager to take on new challenges. You will be prepared to work as an organisation and management specialist and manager of mid-level management staff in companies and public institutions, and to run your own business as well.

As a future manager, you will be equipped with competences to:
