Additional information

Degree Overview

Develop strategies to manage global challenges and opportunities facing businesses, whether it is a business you work in, or your own business that you are looking to establish. You will develop the knowledge to manage people, processes, systems, and operations.

You will gain an in-depth understanding of contemporary business and management issues and be encouraged to critique the theories and concepts of the business and management environment.

You will develop effective team working skills in preparing and making presentations in key areas of management. You'll also improve your critical awareness and synthesis skills and apply these to problem solving. These skills will benefit you throughout your career, but particularly useful in management/leadership roles.

With a focus on leadership, you will learn about business strategy and decision making. You will explore various approaches to leadership, business strategy and decision making, across various businesses and sectors. Management is all about designing, implementing and reviewing strategy. It's often a term that is misunderstood but good managers have a clear understanding of what strategy is.
