Additional information

Criminal Justice Program and Degree Overview

Our qualified and devoted faculty whose educational, career and research backgrounds are directly related to the interests and needs of those pursuing an interdisciplinary degree. Our courses will allow students to critically analyze how institutions that deal with issues of Criminal Justice impede and promote social justice.

Most courses for the Criminal Justice program derive from sociology and political science. Students are required to take courses that set the foundation and build upon their theoretical background, research methodology and practical application of criminal justice issues.

To fulfill the remaining requirements, students can choose from many different electives that focus on areas of emphasis such as Sociology of Corrections, Law & Society, or Procedural Criminal Law. Students specifically interested in designing a pre-law course of study should consult with their academic advisor.

Criminal Justice Major Opportunities

You will participate in an internship, the internship is a supervised criminal justice related work experience.

Not only do students experience, firsthand, the possibilities and limitations of engaging in justice-focused fields, but internships often provide networking which could lead to future career opportunities. Former students have completed internships at local police departments, the state attorney's office, juvenile detention centers and law firms.

Clubs, Associations and Organizations

Join one of the many clubs or organizations for sociology and criminal justice. There are student-led groups that provide the forum for students to meet fellow majors, discuss issues relating to Criminal Justice, plan future events and interact with faculty.

Global Justice Series

Every year, faculty schedule events of particular interest to Criminal Justice majors. Past speakers have included law enforcement professionals, probation officers, prison ministry staff, gang members, and academic researchers studying in areas such as prisons, the military and gangs. Events also include documentary screenings and discussions on pertinent films including those related to military operations, prison torture and human rights.
