Additional information

Degree Overview

Modules on this course such as security and terrorism, and the criminology of war, help you to explore the current social, cultural and political debates surrounding crime. Through your studies you will also learn about crime scene investigation, forensic psychology and miscarriages of justice. During your study, you can also apply for a placement to put your learning into practice. Graduates have gone to careers that include roles in the police, working for the prison and security services, and the Home Office.
