Additional information

Enter the world of Clinical Psychology with a specialisation in Rehabilitation and Gerontopsychology

Are you interested in human behaviour and would like to deepen this interest in a Master's programme? The combination of a Bachelor's degree in psychology and a Master's degree at UE not only gives prospective students access to a broader professional field but also gives them the opportunity to choose specific areas of study. At UE, we offer the Clinical Psychology Master's degree with a focus on rehabilitation and gerontological psychology, as well as a focus on coaching and counselling. We offer prospective students the opportunity to take a master's degree with both concentrations, thus obtaining a double master's degree.

Career Perspectives

Competencies are taught that prepare them for psychological work in a clinical context and also enable them to fill leadership positions.

As a UE student, you'll have access to our Career Development Centre which will support and guide you through any career-related enquiry you may have.

What happens after your studies

Clinical psychologists deal with the therapeutic treatment and support of psychologically and physically ill people. Within rehabilitation psychology, the focus is on restoring the participation of people after physical or mental illnesses (e.g. in psychosomatic, neurological, oncological or geriatric rehabilitation) on a clinical-psychological basis. After completing your Master's degree in Psychology, you will find career opportunities as a psychologist in the following areas:

- Rehabilitation or geriatric clinics
- Psychiatric or neurological clinics
- Outpatient care facilities
- Health care and counselling
- Health insurance companies
