Overview

Develop identities for brands and companies. Experiment with graphics, photography, film, and interactive media. The Bachelor in Communication Design is the design program that equips you to master the entire spectrum of visual communication.

Our environment is shaped by communication and permeated by design. Whether as graphics, photography, film, text, or interactive user interface: how a message is communicated is crucial to how we perceive it. In the B.A. Communication Design program, you will immerse yourself in the diverse forms of representation and communication in commissioned communication, with a focus on visual media and interaction.

You will acquire a variety of design techniques and a wealth of conceptual knowledge as a solid foundation. You will learn to express messages visually and to use classic graphic design, analog and digital photography, film, and web meaningfully.

Your curriculum includes representation and design methodology, advertising psychology, typography, design ethics, illustration techniques, film, and interactive media. You will develop style and understand why something appeals visually. Additionally, you have the opportunity for individual specialization in Editorial Design, Photography, Film and Animation, Illustration, and Creative Coding.
