Political Science Program and Degree Overview

At Concordia University Chicago, our small political science class sizes make it easy for students to get to know their professors. Professors are easily accessible to answer students' questions and informally chat about class discussions or a wide variety of related issues.

We're proud that approximately 90 percent of our students are employed or enrolled in graduate programs in their fields within six months of graduation. We educate students to be faithful, civic minded individuals who will actively engage and change the world through their careers and/or their volunteer efforts. Some political science majors continue their education in graduate school in political science or another social science discipline or go on to law school.

For this major, you will be required to take the introductory American government and politics course and then select your remaining coursework from a variety of electives. Past offerings have included The Politics of the Middle East, Global Terrorism and International Security in addition to:

- Political Theory
- The American Presidency
- State and Local Government
- Constitutional Law
- Public Policy
- American Foreign Policy
- Comparative Politics
- International Relations
