Additional information

Degree Overview

Students in the journalism program learn to meet the challenges of a complex and evolving industry and study critical issues faced in today's complex communications environment. In small classes taught by industry professionals, students develop their ability to create content for a variety of audiences and platforms. The program's emphasis remains core skills such as editing, interviewing, information gathering and reporting, anchoring, producing and writing. Students also gain experience with design, data, multimedia and social media. Curriculum includes diversity issues, law and ethics.

Study Reasons

Gain valuable experience with design, data, multimedia and social media, and produce content for award-winning outlets such as The NewsHouse or NCC News.

Explore opportunities beyond the classroom at the student-run campus newspaper or magazines, three campus radio stations and a student-operated television station

Study critical issues and ethical dilemmas facing today's complex communications environment, including the responsible use of artificial intelligence.
