Why Finance

Finance is not accounting. Finance is about analyzing and managing the risks and returns of investments and assets—both within corporate settings and in trading and banking—to ensure the long-term success of the organization.

Develop a deep understanding of financial markets, financial institutions, and the financial decision-making processes. Manage the risks, returns, and value of traditional and alternative assets and investments. Complete two finance modules to qualify for a minor in finance, or four for a finance major.
